CHECKING OUT THE FRONT YARD—Billy and Vicki Bounds of Pearlington take an afternoon boat ride on Gin road. Gin road was one of the worst hit roads in the area. Water came in to many front yards, but because of precautionary measures taken by residents such as sandbagging, only some 50 houses got water inside. (Staff photo by June M. Heydt)

WATER EVERYWHERE!—The Billy Hoyer family of Pearlington found their mobile home completely surrounded by water when they awoke Sunday. Hoyer and son Archie wait until neighbor brings boat to the family can reach high ground. Pearl River reached its crest around midnight Sunday. A gauge placed by the Corps of Engineers at the Pearl River Marina measured seven feet above sea level which was above the record of 6.2 feet in 1980. (Staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

ON THE MARINA—The level of Ray Baxter's Marina in Pearlington, a Canadian "geese" sun themselves. The geese floated down the river on Sunday morning and landed at the marina. They came from Frank B. Williams' estate up the river north two miles from the marina. "They're not here to stay," said Baxter. "They're in a fenced area where the waters come and they just floated on down," said Baxter. Ben Christmas, caretaker for the Williams' estate drives over in his pickup truck every day and feeds them corn. They know when the corn is coming and they get all excited by making honking noises. "They can't fly, but they are swimming," said Baxter. (Staff photo by June M. Heydt)

Hancock senator, fishermen back Bay attorney

Smith feels Phillips nomination will die

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.
State Sen. Martin Smith of Poplarville feels Gov. William Winter's nomination to the Wildlife Conservation Commission of Bay St. Louis attorney Walter Phillips will not be confirmed by the Senate Conservation Committee.

Phillips' confirmation, which would place him on the commission, is opposed by several committee members, including Sen. Tommy Gollott of Biloxi. Smith, and a representative of the Gulf Coast Fishermen's Association both this week endorsed Phillips for the position.

Kenny May of the association said the group supports Phillips because the organization feels the Bay man would be an impartial member and Hancock fisherman for the first time in several years would be fairly represented. The fishermen also believe the Biloxi Gollott family, primarily seafood dealers, wield too much influence on the commission regarding catch limits, according to May who is also a dealer. He explained Billy Gollott, commission president whom the governor is attempting to replace, is a dealer; Jerry Gollott, a relative, is the commission's chief enforcement officer; and Sen. Tommy Gollott is a cousin of the commission president. Phillips would be the only commissioner from the Gulf Coast area. Smith, a member of the committee, reported the Senate group last week in a split vote tabled Phillips' nomination. In a ruling several years ago by the then Lt. Gov. Winter, he said a tabled committee nomination does not kill it, the senator revealed.

Even if the committee votes to oppose Phillips, a minority report could be presented to the Senate which would consider the nomination, the senator said.

But Smith feels the governor will not push for a minority report.

Smith explained if the legislature adjourns (probably this week) without a committee recommendation, Billy Gollott's term will end and the governor will have to appoint someone other than Phillips to serve on the commission pending legislative approval next year.

The senator, who represents Hancock County, feels Conservation Chairman Charles Nix of Batesville will not recall the committee unless Winter recommends someone else.

Flood aftermath reported

By JUNE M. HEYDT

The Pearl River, which crested at 7-feet above sea level at midnight Sunday as registered on the gauge at Roy Baxter's Marina, left an aftermath of memories both happy and sad.

Vicki Bounds, a resident of Pearlington, remembers the floods of 1979-80 but this one seemed different she said. "This time it was flat eerie. It was eerie to see that much water come in and it just kept coming."

Weary residents sat in front of the Community Center Monday afternoon taking a breath or two after a weekend of continuous work bagging sand, loading trucks and distributing polyethylene. They talked about the events that happened during the flood. L.J. Dunaway, a local volunteer, said "We loaded trucks down and unloaded till we couldn't load anymore."

Two volunteers, Gary and Cheryl Bennett, both agreed, "The water went in places it's never been before it was even higher than it was in Camille."

Other volunteers who were gathered in front of the center said that thanks should be given to several people and companies for their help during this disaster.

Among those mentioned was the International Paper Company who lent the town their truck. "It was the only truck in the area that could get through the water to deliver the sand bags," said some of the men standing around the truck.

Also mentioned were the volunteer fire department workers.

Jay Breshers who brought four smoked turkeys to the Community Center and all the other people who donated food and clothing were noted along with thanks to the women who cooked and made coffee and tea during the long hours of sandbagging.

The tremendous help the trustees from the jail gave was gratefully acknowledged also.

A person mentioned several times by the residents was a radio station announcer from WWL in New Orleans, Frank Davis, who kept in contact with the community giving the town information from the outside that they couldn't get from anywhere else.

Judge overrules new trial, bond for convicted rapist

Circuit Court Judge James Thomas Wednesday afternoon in Bay St. Louis overruled motions by Hancock County's public defender requesting a new trial and setting bond for a man found guilty Tuesday of rape.

A Hancock jury found Jay Bee Cunningham, 28, of New Orleans guilty with the recommendation that he be given the maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Cunningham received the recommended sentence by Thomas on Tuesday after a one-day trial.

Included in attorney William Frisbie's arguments for a new trial was that attorneys representing the state "systematically" removed blacks during jury selection. Cunningham is black.

The public defender also said the state statute involved in the ruling was unconstitutional.

Cunningham's lawyer, public defender William Frisbie, said he will appeal the conviction which is automatic in such rulings.

Cunningham, who faces additional trials for rape, kidnapping and armed robbery, was tried for raping a Louisiana woman whose car broke down on the night of May 29, 1981 on I-10 while she was traveling to a wedding in Biloxi.

He was tried only on the charge of raping the woman in Hancock.

Cunningham is accused of raping the same woman a second time in Harrison County.

Cunningham escaped twice from the Hancock County jail while awaiting trial. He was captured both times in New Orleans and returned to Mississippi.

The 25-year-old victim's testimony was presented to the jury with the press and spectators excluded from the courtroom.

In a recent Hancock Circuit Court matter a mistrial was declared in the case of a Pass Christian man charged with attempted rape.

The jury told Thomas it was hopelessly deadlocked in trying to decide the case of James A. Gibbs.

The 25-year-old Gibbs is accused of attempting to rape a woman in the ## Suit seeks $1.5 million

A suit seeking $1.5 million was filed Wednesday against Bay St. Louis Newspapers, Inc. in Hancock County Circuit Court, according to Ellis Cuevas, editor and publisher of The Sea Coast Echo.

The suit was filed by Melvin Alexander Prescott of Bay St. Louis in connection with photographs and captions reporting a Bay St. Louis accident involving a vehicle owned by Prescott in the October 21, 1982 issue of The Sea Coast Echo.

Prescott seeks $750,000 in punitive damages, and also $750,000 in actual damages.

The suit alleges publication of the material invaded his right to privacy, placed him before the public in a false light, and greatly injured and prejudiced (him) in employment.

The plaintiff alleges he "was terminated from his position as a direct result of the subject articles," and that he has been caused "to suffer embarrassment, humiliation, mental anguish and anxiety, lost wages, injury to his reputation and name, and will continue to suffer."

Prescott was charged with driving under the influence, leaving the scene of an accident and reckless driving by Bay St. Louis police following the Oct. 19, 1982 accident.

Bay St. Louis City Judge Joseph Benvenuti found Prescott not guilty of those charges in a Jan. 28 hearing. Prescott was found guilty of causing property damage, fined $500 and ordered to make restitution for the damages.

Judge

Chocktaw Plaza parking lot in Waveland on Dec. 12.

A new trial will be set, probably in the July term of Hancock Circuit Court said Frisbie, also Gibbs' attorney.

Gibbs has three convictions in North Carolina for kidnapping, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, and assault on a female. Besides the Waveland charge, Gibbs faces three additional charges of attempted rape on the Coast.

He has been held in the Harrison County jail under $20,000 bond on each of the charges since his arrest.

Actions taken in Thomas' court during the first of a three-week court term include:

—Robert Tanguis, 27, an unemployed shipyard worker of BaySide Park, was sentenced to 10 years in the state penitentiary after pleading guilty to six counts of burglary of homes in Clermont Harbor, BaySide Park and Lakeshore during a two-week period in November and December.

—David S. Powell, 29, unemployed cab driver of Gulfport, charged with four counts of burglarizing homes in BaySide last August and September, pleaded guilty to one of the charges, but denied participation in the others.

Powell, who has three burglary convictions, was sentenced to 10 years on the single charge.

—Thomas E. James, 22, unemployed body mechanic of Waveland, pleaded guilty to six counts of burglary of homes in Waveland during January.

He was charged with a kidnapping on each of the charges, to run concurrently.

—Lloyd E. Miller, 21, of Garden Isles subdivision, pleaded guilty as an accomplice to James in the Waveland burglaries, received the same sentence.

—Donald Joseph Jenkins, 34, unemployed shipyard worker of BaySide, pleaded guilty to stealing a purse left in the unattended nursery of Lutheran Church of the Pines in Waveland on Jan. 3.

—Doris Johnson, 27, unemployed, of Shoreline Park, received a five-year suspended sentence with three years' probation, fined court costs and ordered to pay $350 for legal services after pleading guilty to burglarizing a Bay St. Louis home July.

—Gravling Wilkerson, 20, of Bay St. Louis, received a three-year suspended sentence with three years' probation after pleading guilty to burglary of a home on Ballentine St. in Bay St. Louis on Feb. 4 with an accomplice.

—Olen Bounds, 23, of Bay St. Louis, pleaded no contest to a misdemeanor charge of receiving stolen property. He received the maximum sentence — three months, but Thomas suspended it. He was also fined $100 and court costs.

—Richard Simpson, 21, of Pearl-ington received a hearing on a charge of violation of the terms of probation, ordered two years' probation after he pleaded guilty to accessory after the fact to burglary for which he received a five-year suspended sentence with five years' probation.

—Louis G. Arceneaux, 24, of BaySide, received a three-year suspended sentence and two years' probation after pleading guilty to a charge of receiving an outboard motor and tank that he knew were stolen.

—Armed robbery charges against Bob Stewart of Waggaman, La., were dropped by the District Attorney's office, and an order approving that action was signed by Thomas on April 4.

AGRICULTURE'S CRASH DIET

U.S. agriculture is going on a crash diet this year — retiring a third of its normal crop acreage — to fight its own battle of the bulge of crop surpluses.

It seems uncanny that farmers in this nation really have opted to take $2 million acres of land out of production through the government's payment-in-kind program. Ideally farmland taken out of production will be seeded in soil building or retaining clovers and grasses. But in these hard times it is likely too that a lot of it will be neglected and will end up blanketed in weeds as well.

Purpose of their exercise this year is to make a collective stab at genuinely reducing this country's burdensome supply of crops that has built up in storehouses and which has reduced farm prices below the profit level. For their cooperation in reducing this year, farmers will be given surplus commodities for what they otherwise would have produced on their idled acres.

Crops included in the program include wheat, corn, sorghum, rice and cotton. Soybeans are planted on more acreage in Mississippi than any other farm crop, but are not included in the program because they are not considered as being in serious surplus supply.

And while most farm leaders acknowledge that there may be some shortcomings in the program, farmers have endorsed the idea because it also gives them some relief from annual production expenses that fall short of cash receipts for their crops. They know too that this is an opportunity for the government to share in the burden of depressed prices that has come about in no small measure by the government's interference in international trade for a number of years now.

The significant sign-up in the cropland retirement program this year is a sign that agriculture's crash diet will definitely reduce carryover supplies at the end of the autumn harvest, and too it will improve a seriously sagging farm income by reducing production expenses.

With an eye of farmers' sign-up in the program, economists see a corn crop this season of 5.8 billion bushels, our smallest crop since 1978 and well below last year's record crop of 8.4 billion bushels. For wheat, production is expected to drop to 2.2 billion bushels, substantially below last year's record of 2.8 billion bushels.

More importantly, end of the year stocks of all the major crops are expected to be down. Corn and rice supplies will measure 40 percent less than a year ago while wheat and cotton will shrink 20 percent, and sorghum and soybeans by another five percent even though soybeans are not in the PIK program.

Farmers have entered the program advisedly — looking past experience right in the eye. They know it is human nature for farmers to keep their best land in production and retire less productive acres. And they know too that not all farmers will cooperate and some will stay outside of the crop retirement program and try to speculate on those crops which at the outset show the best promise of a profit if things — like weather — go their way.

Hancock school board names hearing officer

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Hancock County School Board members voted Monday night to appoint Attorney Randall Jones of Pass Christian as hearing officer to be present at the non-renewal of contract hearing for Harlin Hill.

Harlin Hill, state and federal programs coordinator, after receiving a notice of non-reemployment, requested a hearing through his attorney Yvonne Sills.

It is the hearing officer's duty to set the date for the hearing within 30 days of the request for hearing.

Following the meeting Terry H. Randolph, superintendent, said that he had heard that Jones had represented Hill in the past and that if this were true it would be a conflict-of-interest issue and if this is the case they will have to appoint another hearing officer. He said he would look into the matter.

In other business, the board approved the release of two students, Lisa Ann Bell and Lee Beth Jones, from the district to attend school in Harrison County for the 1983-84 school year.

The board approved an out-of-state field trip for students in grades 1-3 at the Charles P. Murphy School to visit the Audubon Zoo in New Orleans on April 14.

Approval was granted by the board for Rhea Scaffid, Leola Stoufflet's eight student council representatives, Superintendent Randolph and Myra Peterson to attend the Nutrition Education Seminar in Jackson on April 25-26.

The transfer of David Stockstill from Charles B. Murphy Elementary to Hancock North Central for the 1983-84 school year was approved.

Members attending the meeting included, Terry H. Randolph, superintendent; Manuel Cuevas; Johnny Banks; George Ladner; Billie Faye Lyons; and Tommy Shaw.

The meeting was recessed until 6:30 p.m. Monday, April 25.

Convoy of supplies delivered to victims

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Trucks and cars loaded with groceries, clothing, water, baby food, diapers and dog food stood in front of the First Assembly of God Church in Waveland on Tuesday morning.

They were filled with supplies donated to the church by members and people in the community for victims in outlying flood areas.

Rev. Charles Clark, pastor of the church, said, "We made an announcement over station WXGR radio stating that members of the church will deliver supplies to the disaster areas. The response from the community was great," Clark said, adding "Calls are still coming in from people who want to offer help."

Harold Kent, a member of the church, is heading the convoy which will deliver the supplies to Lois Holder at the Gateway bookstore in Slidell. The bookstore is being set-up as headquarters for the distribution of the supplies to needy flood victims.

"We were first going to go to the Pearlinton and Wolf River areas, but when we called down there they said they weren't in need of anything at this time."

Members of the church also plan on offering their services in helping with the clean-up of flood damaged property. "We're going to get out and work right in their homes," said Clark.

The First Assembly of God Church, which is located on Arnold Street in Waveland, is 15-years-old and has a connecting school offering grades 1-12.

Members of the church often get involved in community services. Pastor Clark has been with the church for eight years and says that he loves the coast and the people on it.

David Garcia, Hancock County deputy, was re-routing traffic at the intersection of US-90 and Highway 607. Water over US-90 on the Louisiana side of Pearl River caused the highway's closing. ## I-10 traffic continues detour through NSTL

All roads in Mississippi are open except Interstate 10 leading west at the Mississippi-Louisiana state line, confirmed the Mississippi State Highway Patrol late Wednesday evening.

State troopers are stationed at the intersection of I-10 and Hwy. 607 re-routing I-10 traffic onto Hwy. 607 to I-59 at Nicholson and south again to I-10 east of Slidell where it reopens to west-bound traffic.

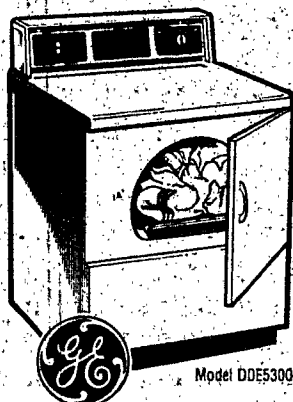

This is about a 30-minute delay, according to the Mississippi Highway Patrol.

Small amounts of water still cover I-10, but the roadbed has been damaged by water, said Louisiana State Police.

Hwy. 607 through the NASA test site has been opened to traffic from I-10 north to Nicholson. This road will stay opened until the interstate reopens, according to NSTL spokeswoman Lisa Mond.

EDITORIAL

Pearlington, a forgotten Mississippi Community!

On listening to radio reports one would have believed the flooding was over for all Mississippians Saturday morning.

Yet, the Pearl River did not crest in Pearlington until around midnight Sunday.

As many of us know, Pearlington is one of the state's original Coastal cities, and has been in Mississippi for many years. Some Pearlington residents descend from a long line of natives.

Governor William Winter, to whom the statement was attributed about the flooding being over, apparently received the information about Mississippi's flooding from state employees with the same attitude as those expressed by a Mississippi State Highway Department employee to one member of the Hancock County Board of Supervisor on Saturday.

This state employee was moaning and groaning because he had to work on a Saturday.

We guess the state employees felt since it was the weekend the flooding was over as far as they were concerned—they were ready for their usual time off.

Just across the river in Louisiana there were Louisiana state troopers, Louisiana national guardsmen, U.S. Corps of Engineers personnel, Louisiana State Highway Department engineers, and a variety of other Louisiana state officials helping the local authorities.

They were assisting with the emergency there, and yet in Pearlington, Mississippi state officials were very scarce, virtually no where to be found.

We realize Pearlington was not the only area of the state flooding, yet it seems the Mississippi officials should have demonstrated the same concern for Pearlington residents as they did earlier in the week for flood victims elsewhere in the state.

When more than 200 families are affected by a disaster, we feel it is of major importance.

Sure, probably only 50 or so homes had water in them, with some owned by weekenders, but all of those residences were cut off due to flooded roads.

The old record of 6.2 feet was set in 1980 and this year's crest reached seven feet above sea level at Baxter's Marina in Pearlington.

Even an elementary school and post office were isolated by the flood waters.

We spent many hours in the Pearlington area Friday through Monday and all we saw were two conservation officers, and two state highway department workers.

Pearlington is traversed by U.S. Highway 90 and State Highway 604, yet we did not see even one Mississippi state trooper.

Oh yes, we did see several Louisiana state troopers across the line on US-90.

This was not the usual spring flood—it was the third 'one hundred-year flood' in five years for Pearlington, and it broke all records.

When local officials have to appeal via a New Orleans radio station for help in getting sandbags on Sunday, as the old saying goes, 'something is rotten in Denmark.'

Another big problem was the lack of information for the residents of Pearlington on when the crest of the flood would reach their area of the river.

There were many reports on expected cresting at Pearl River, La., and Slidell, La., but no official reports for Pearlington which we were able to secure.

During the flood of 1980 a Corps of Engineers representative was at the Pearlington Community Center, and he was able to make official information available to the local residents.

It was just a big guess last weekend as to when a crest would reach the Pearlington area.

We hope there will never be another flood for our citizens, and if one does happen, we hope they are not forgotten.

TAKING SANDBAG ORDERS—Bert Courge, Hancock Supervisor for District One, receives order from a Pearlington resident on Sunday needing sandbags to protect property from rising Pearl River waters in Pearlington. Courge and his crew from District One placed the Pearlington Community Center day and night during the crisis. Local volunteers of all ages provided labor and food throughout the ordeal. Robert Clark, chairman of disaster services for the American Red Cross, reports the community center is now open for persons having flood waters. The Red Cross will provide assistance to these people in addition to giving them kit. (Staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

CROSSING PROBLEMS—This moving van ran into difficulty in trying to cross the railroad tracks at Clermont Harbor late Saturday. The driver of the van was John K. Kowalchuk of Shreveport, La., according to investigation officer Eddie Jennings of the Hancock County Sheriff's Office. A 35-car freight was alerted via radio by the L&N's Mobile office and stopped before reaching the crossing. The van was moved from the tracks by N.A. Perniclaro and Son Wrecker Service. R.E. Badinger, of New Orleans, engineer of Freight No. 472, said notification from Mobile enabled him to stop in time. He reported it would have taken at least one mile to stop the long freight, and his view was limited to less than one-half of a mile due to a curve in the tracks. W.O. Wastson of Silverhill, Ala. was flagman. Some type of warning about the sharp incline of this crossing is apparently needed for long trucks and tractor-trailer rigs with low under-carriage. ## Quotables by Cuevas

We have heard nothing but praises for Bert Courge, Hancock County District One board of supervisor, during the ordeal of the flooding of the Pearl River at Pearlington.

Courge's county crews assisted by West Hancock County Volunteer Fire Department firefighters and auxiliary members, citizen volunteers, and Hancock County Jail trustees should all be commended for their efforts over several days in providing sandbags for residents threatened by rising waters.

Many others are to be thanked such as the International Paper Company for the use of their truck for delivery of sandbags.

J.V. Ladner, District One foreman, said delivery of sandbags would have been impossible in some areas without the use of IP's large truck.

To the several people who brought sandbags on Sunday when no more were available at the Community Center, and to the person who delivered a large load of sand from New Orleans around two a.m. Monday, we extend our thanks.

Offers of manpower from several churches, food, coffee, iced tea, desserts, people who prepared the food for the many workers—one cannot praise them enough.

Sheriff Ronnie Peterson along with his many regular and auxiliary deputies patrolled Pearlington during the flood protecting property—they did a fine job.

Supervisor Sam Perniclaro delivered several loads of sand for sandbags and we know the residents of Pearlington appreciate his assistance.

Robert Clark, chairman of disaster services for the American Red Cross, should also be commend for his offers of assistance to the people of Pearlington.

And to everyone who helped or offered assistance, we know the folks of the affected area will never forget your kindnesses.

The students of Hancock North Central will sponsor a blood drawing on Monday, April 18 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the school's gym.

This blood drawing will be conducted by the Hancock County Chapter of the American Red Cross which has a contract to supply blood to Hancock General Hospital.

The blood received at this drawing will be used for the people of Hancock County, according to J.D. (Big John) Rutherford, Hancock County blood chairman.

The drawing will be the first ever sponsored by the Hancock North Central students, and we want to express our appreciation to these fine young men and women for their concern in helping with such an important project.

One never knows when blood will be needed for oneself or a family member.

The Hancock County Blood Bank has been serving the citizens for almost as many years as we can remember. It is also one of the agencies funded by the United Way of Hancock County.

Students 17-years-old and older and weighing 110 pounds or more may donate blood.

The drawing, of course, is not just for the students, so we are hoping many adults in the area of HNC will also visit the gym and offer a unit of blood.

We hope it is a good drawing and 100 units are collected on Monday. This will mean that many more will have to turn out as not everyone can give blood.

Senator Cochran reports

FARMERS HOME IMPROVE LOAN PROCESSING

Senator Thad Cochran has warned top Farmers Home Administration officials to improve their loan processing situation or "face intensive questioning and oversight from Congress."

Senator Cochran, presiding over hearings of an Appropriations subcommittee on Farmers Home's 1984 budget request, reminded agency officials "we began urging you to help farmers work out their 1983 credit problems last fall."

"Now, as the planting season is underway, we are deluged by appeals from desperate farmers who cannot get a decision one way or the other on their loan application. Many may be forced out of production because of Farmers Home's bottleneck."

Cochran, chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on agriculture and rural development, said the "situation has already reached a crisis point in my own state of Mississippi."

He further reminded agency spokesmen present that he and other farm state Senators sponsored legislation in the lame-duck session last year to help alleviate some of the credit problems, but could not win backing from the administration.

Senator Cochran also pointed out the emergency jobs bill enacted by Congress earlier this year contained $6.5 million for extra personnel for Farmers Home, to help overcome the shortage of key loan processing people in many county offices.

He said "it has always been the intent of this Senator, this panel, and those of us in Congress concerned about farmers, that the agency have adequate resources to carry out its mandate."

The Senator's comments came Thursday as his subcommittee reviewed Farmers Home's 1984 budget request.

Mississippi Economic Council

CONSOLIDATION

Should Mississippi consolidate some of its school systems?

That's a question that will be the subject of a discussion early next month when the Mississippi Economic Council holds its Annual Membership Meeting in Jackson.

School consolidation, which has long been supported by the Council, is one of the most important issues facing education in Mississippi. Under present operations, there seem to be too many schools in too many school districts.

At the Council's Annual Meeting a leading legislator and leading educators will discuss this timely topic. The question of future school consolidation is one which the Legislature raised in its December 1982 special session when it enacted the Education Reform Act.

The measure requires the state to investigate the feasibility of further consolidating some of the state's public school systems. And the Council's April 7 discussion will be the first public forum on this vital issue.

Last November the people of Mississippi registered their support of education reforms when they passed the constitutional amendment for a lay state board of education. School consolidation will be one of the first jobs this new lay board will tackle, and the Council supports the new board in this effort.

Mississippi Health Department offers flood clean-up advice

"Helping hands" becomes more than a catchy commercial jingle when Mississippians must face such natural disasters as spring floods.

Individuals, state and federal agencies, and other organizations contribute "helping hands" to deal with the prevention, control, and clean up associated with such crises.

The Mississippi State Department of Health from its central office in Jackson through district offices and county health departments reaches out to help people avoid the hurt and take care of the havoc left in the wake of the flood.

"Stress may be the most significant of the health indicators," said State Health Officer Dr. Alton B. Cobb.

"I was in the Easter Flood of 1979, and I recall having felt quite stressed. Probably the most important help in dealing with the stress is the support of other people. For example, our church called last night to say people and facilities are on hold to help other people as needs arise. We must remember to be receptive to giving and receiving help from other people, organizations, and such groups as the mental health centers."

The State Health Officer also voiced concern about accidents and disease prevention.

"We must take the time to be careful," Dr. Cobb stressed. "When we hurry, we're more susceptible to having unnecessary accidents.

"People who must come into contact with the flood waters should remember that flood waters are dirty waters," he said.

"We assume that those waters are contaminated. That's why we encourage everyone to make sure that their tetanus vaccinations or booster shots are up to date. Anyone who's in doubt should contact his physician or county health department."

Protective clothing—boots, rain coats, gloves—is essential for disaster relief workers, Dr. Cobb added.

In the aftermath of disasters and as soon as the situation becomes stable enough for personnel to move into the affected area, public health workers check food and water supplies for possible contamination.

Municipal and community water supplies are probably safe, unless publicly announced otherwise, said Joe Brown, chief of the State Department of Health Bureau of Environmental Health. Private wells that have been submerged should be properly chlorinated before water is used for human consumption.

Recommendations for chlorination are available from the county health department.

Anyone who is not certain about the quality of his drinking water should boil it vigorously for a full minute or disinfect it with chlorine and let stand 30 minutes before using.

Food sanitation is critical to good health: Any food left in the house or market during a flood should be inspected; flood water may have covered it, dripped on it, or seeped into it. Any uncertainty about the safety of food should result in discarding the food.

Public health officials share the following guidelines about food safety:

"Discard: opened containers and packages which have come in contact with flood waters; unopened jars and bottles with paper seals; containers of spices, seasonings, and flavorings; flour, sugar, and coffee in canisters; paper, cloth, fiber, or cardboard boxes of food; even if the contents seem dry; denting, bulging, or leaking tin cans; jam or jelly sealed with paraffin; commercially bottled carbonated beverages; all fresh vegetables and fruits which do not have a peel, shell, or coating which can be removed; leafy vegetables; fresh meat, fish, and poultry; eggs; and home canned foods, even if the jar seems tightly sealed.

"Keep: Undamaged tin cans (for added safety, boil food before eating); potatoes (washed, sanitized, dried, peeled, and cooked before using); citrus fruits; apples and other fruits which can be sanitized, peeled, and cooked before eating.

All cans and commercial glass jars must be washed and sanitized before they are opened. Fruits and vegetables can also be disinfected for safe human consumption. How-to's are available from the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

Any question about the safety of food or water supplies may be addressed to the county health department. Public health personnel cooperate with other emergency response agencies and organizations to respond in a manner that will prevent disease and result in continued good health for all Mississippians.

Vo-tech schools helpful in making career change

This year, millions of Americans will consider changing careers.

Many people, however, seeking a career change will need to learn new skills before successfully switching careers.

Today, many individuals are turning to America's trade and technical schools to learn the necessary skills they need to pursue a new career.

Specialized trade and technical schools appeal to people seeking a career change because the training is job-oriented and intensive.

In addition, trade and technical schools emphasize "hands-on" training using the same equipment that is used on the job.

"Thousands of people each year use our schools as springboards to new careers," said Henry Herzog, president of the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools (NATTS), an educational association representing over 500 private career schools across the country. "They realize that by learning a skill the odds of changing careers improve dramatically."

Until recently, most Americans were content with one career. Today, however, with rapid advances in technology changing many jobs, it's not too unusual to meet many people who have changed careers.

"We're seeing it all," said Herzog. "The homemaker who wants to become a real estate agent, the engineer who wants to open a sporting goods store, and the math teacher who wants to become a computer service technician are typical of the kinds of career transitions we help people to achieve each year."

Buck Ladner seeks new senate seat

Earl (Buck) Ladner Jr. has announced his candidacy this week for the office of State Senator, District No. 46.

The new senate seat he seeks, includes sections of Hancock, Harrison, and Jackson counties.

Ladner is 35-years-old and served with the Hancock County Sheriff's Department under two administrations, 1965-69.

Presently Ladner holds the position of president of Gulf Coast Securities, Inc., and is a member of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and the Knights of Columbus.

In 1969, he was the youngest elected Justice Court Judge in the State of Mississippi, and he also served as a Mississippi State Representative for Hancock County from 1972 to 1976, at which time he did not seek reelection due to private business interests.

Ladner states, "Two of my priorities, if elected to the office of State Senator, will be law enforcement and education. These positions can be confirmed by my past voting record in the Mississippi House of Representatives."

EARL (BUCK) LADNER JR.

"As State Senator, I will definitely work for industrial growth throughout Hancock, Harrison and Jackson counties. When you have industrial growth, economic growth follows," Ladner added.

Ladner said, "I ask each person throughout the senatorial district, as well as the entire Gulf Coast, to consider my qualifications and past proven record."

(Bald Pol. Adv.)

Although it's difficult to define what constitutes a career change, most authorities agree it's really the individual's perception that counts. If he or she perceives a job change to be a significant departure, it should be considered a career change.

Reasons For Change

While the specific justifications people give for changing careers vary tremendously, labor experts contend that there are generally three basic reasons why most individuals seek a new career—changes in one's family situation, job changes—plant shut-downs or the introduction of new equipment, or simply internal pressures caused by one's preoccupation with career and life satisfaction.

"Most career changers come to us with a strong sense of commitment," Herzog said. "They know what they want and they know we can help them without taking three or four years in the process."

According to Herzog there are 88 new careers for career changers to consider and most programs enable students to complete their training in two years or less. These schools emphasize specialized training with less training unrelated to the occupational goal, plus a chance to finish quicker. Classes are usually small and start frequently throughout the year.

"Access and time are vital," said Herzog. "A lot of people are facing serious employment and career difficulties in this country that can't wait until September or December for the training to begin. They need to start training today for tomorrow's careers."

For many Americans the ever-changing job market will mean new jobs, new careers and new opportunities. In the years ahead more people will experience different jobs and different careers. To keep workers in touch with new developments and rapid advances in technology, equally rapid training will be crucial.

Handbook Available. For a free copy of the 1982-83 Handbook of Trade and Technical Careers and Training, readers should write to NATTS, 2021 K Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20006-1077.

The 48-page Handbook lists over 500 accredited trade and technical schools nationwide. It also provides information on choosing a career and a career school.

GCRL offers unique marine study opportunities

Two new college level marine science courses, Oceanography II and Carcinology, are offered during the 1983 summer teaching session at the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory, according to Dr. David W. Cook, registrar.

"We will have an especially broad program this summer," Cook says.

"The oceanography course will provide additional career planning opportunities for beginning science students and the carcinology class will give advanced students a new area for special study and research. In short, this summer we'll have something for almost all college students, from sophomores on up."

Oceanography II: Marine Biology, a second term course offered July 11-August 12, introduces marine biology with an emphasis on local flora and fauna.

Following a brief review of factors affecting sea life, the course gives an in-depth study of marine algae, salt marsh and sea grasses, marine microbiology, and marine invertebrates and invertebrates.

Although the course is offered separately from its first counterpart, Oceanography I: Physical, Chemical and Geological, students taking both can sample most aspects of oceanography in 10 weeks while earning 10 semester hours credit.

The Carcinology class, available to more advanced students with the instructor's consent, is offered by arrangement as a "special topics" study course or "special problems" research project.

The course focuses on the taxonomy, systematics, and ecology of malacostracan crustaceans with emphasis on the orders Stomatopoda, Mysidacea, Cumacea, Tanaidacea, Isopoda, Amphipoda and Edeapoda.

According to the instructor, Dr. Richard Heard, students taking carcinology as a "special problem," may conduct projects such as the description of new taxa, preparation of publications, scientific illustrations and taxonomic keys, trophic relationships, zoogeography, habitat preferences and niche partitioning.

The class carries one to six semester hours upper level undergraduate or graduate credit.

Other first term courses and instructors are: Marine Invertebrate Zoology (May 30-July 8), Dr. Edwin Cate and Dr. Richard Heard; Oceanography I: Physical, Chemical and Geological (June 6-July 8), Staff; Marine Microbiology (June 6-July 8), Dr. David Cook; Marine Ecology (June 6-July 8), Dr. Terry McBee and Dr. Robert Woodmansee; and Salt Marsh Plant Ecology (June 13-July 8), Dr. Lionel Eleuterius.

Second term courses and instructors are as follows: marine Vertebrate Zoology and Ichthyology (July 11-August 19), Dr. John Sharp; Aquaculture (July 11-August 19), Dr. Edwin Cate; Behavior and Neurobiology of Marine Animals (July 11-August 5), Dr. Leo Demski; Marine Botany (July 11-August 5), Dr. R. B. Channell; Coastal Marine Geology (July 11-July 29), Dr. Ervin Otvos.

Courses offered by arrangement are: Special Problems in Marine Science, Carcinology, and Comparative Histology of Marine Organisms.

All classes are field oriented, giving students a unique opportunity to observe specimens in their natural habitats. Frequent trips are made into the bayous and salt marshes surrounding the Lab, as well as to the barrier islands and into the open Gulf of Mexico.

Courses are open to college graduates and undergraduates. Junior standing or above is required for all courses except Oceanography I and II. Some prerequisites are required for each course. Credit earned (3-6 semester hours) depends upon the length of the course.

More information on courses, living arrangements, and tuition is available by writing to: The Registrar, GCRL, Ocean Springs, Ms 39564.

INVADED BY WATER-Much of the Community of Pearlington in southwestern Hancock County was completely covered by a record flood this week. Roy Baxter, of the community, said normally there is an East and a West Pearl River, but record flooding created just one big river. Docking facilities at Baxter's Marina Sunday were covered with water. (Staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

NECK INJURIES

An auto collision that doesn't damage your car may still cause serious damage to your spine. Your body, cushioned against the back of the seat, moves forward with the impact, but your head jerks back, and the violent strain may be great enough to cause one or more spinal bones in the neck to slip out of position. This Dr. Wm. L. Powell results in interference with nerve energy, by impinging a nerve or compressing the spinal cord. Bringing about conditions of muscle spasm, neuralgia, severe headaches, especially at the base of the head, and arm and shoulder conditions. The insidious thing about occurrences like these, is that they may not give rise to immediate symptoms right after the accident—but weeks later the trouble usually begins. It is a wise procedure to consult your doctor of Chiropractic after every accident.

JEWS IN VENICE
An award-winning documentary about the life of Jews in Venice who lived and practiced their religion in segregation for more than 280 years can be seen at 10 p.m., Monday, April 18, on the Mississippi ETV Network.
Produced, written and narrated by opera star Regina Resnik, "Geto: The Historic Ghetto of Venice" presents the ghetto, called the "geto," as it stands today, with its beautiful synagogues that house both the religious and secular life of the community. The Doge of Venice proclaimed in 1515 that all Jews were forbidden to live in the city of Venice. The Jews who chose to remain were obliged to transfer themselves and all their possessions to the site of an ancient cannonball factory—the "geto." This Italian word has become associated, through the ages, with the Jewish people, and the world's first "ghetto" still stands in Venice today.
Ms. Resnick became involved with the geto of Venice when "The Monument of the Holocaust" by her husband, artist Arbat Blatas, was installed in 1980. "On that day," he said, "I knew there was a great drama in the story of that first ghetto."
Kennedy Center
Zoe Caldwell and Judith Anderson star in Robinson Jeffers' adaptation of the Greek classic "Medea" on "Kennedy Center Tonight" at 8 p.m., Wednesday, April 20, on the Mississippi ETV Network.
"Medea" depicts the ultimate revenge of a passionate woman who is cast aside by her ambitious husband, bent on marrying his way to new power and riches. The two children involved became the victims of Medea's rage.
Ms. Caldwell, Dame Anderson and producer Robert Whitehead are interviewed in a special program, "Reflections on Medea," at 9:30 p.m., Monday, April 18.

BBC SERIES

"The Computer Programme," a popular BBC series that introduces the world of computers and computing to adults as well as younger viewers, can be seen at 7:30 p.m., Tuesdays, beginning April 19, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

Knowledge of computers and their operations is becoming an educational asset. Those unfamiliar with computers are comprising a new statistic: the so-called "computer illiterates."

"The Computer Programme" is designed for beginners, including those with "computer anxieties." Co-host of the series, Chris Serle, himself a beginner, is introduced to computer language and programming techniques from scratch.

"That's a big advantage," he says. "It means I can ask many of the questions I know a lot of our audience wants to ask."

His companion on the series, computer professional Ian McNaught-Davis, began working in data processing more than two decades ago. His objective, he says, is to help demystify computers and to "make them as understandable and useful to ordinary people as television sets or cars are now." Says Serle, "Don't despair that computers are only for experts and buffs. This series will show that the computer is within the reach of anybody—including me."

50s STARS

The fifties was a time of strapless prom gowns, Saturday afternoon football games, convertibles and "The Tennessee Waltz."

Americans invited Arthur Godfrey into their homes each day, chuckled along with Bob and Ray and tapped their toes to the many hit records fashioned by Mitch Miller. It was a post-war world that seemed full of promise, and the entertainment field was young and alive with new talent.

Some of the performers who made all of that happen come together in "The 50s: Moments to Remember," a gala, three-hour television musical tribute to the standard, non-rock music of the era, first telecast on ETV in 1981.

It can be seen again at 9 p.m., Saturday, April 16, on the Mississippi ETV Network.

L.T. RONALD THORNTON

The 13-week Signal Officer Basic Course (SOBC) prepares newly commissioned United States Army Signal Corps Lieutenants for their first duty assignments.

Academic subjects encompass instruction in leadership, management, and tactical communications systems and operations.

The officers participate in one-week Field Training Exercise (FTX) in which they install, operate, and maintain a tactical signal center.

Lieutenant Thornton did well in the FTX, obtaining 99 points out of a possible 100 on leadership merits.

In addition Lieutenant Thornton will attend the Command Staff Electronic Officers Course at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma. The course is two and a half months long.

Lieutenant Thornton has been assigned as the Command Staff Electronic Officer for the 1st Battalion 32nd Artillery 3rd Armored Division, Friedburg, West Germany.

Lieutenant Thornton

graduated from Bay Senior High School in 1978, attended Pearl River Junior College attaining an associate of arts degree in 1980.

He graduated with a BS in political science and history from The University of Southern Mississippi in the summer of 1982.

Lieutenant Thornton is the son of the late Henry and Margaret Thornton of Bay St. Louis.

Trustees laud Bay school transportation management

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

A Bay St. Louis Municipal Separate School District Board of Trustees Transportation Committee report issued Monday night lauded the district's bus system and its supervisor.

Trustee James Ginn, a member of the two-person committee which also includes Trustee Cyril Glover, praised the district Transportation Department and Donald Caldwell, assistant superintendent and transportation supervisor.

Walter Turcotte, board president, formed the committee at a recent meeting after the trustees questioned several bus repair bills.

Ginn at the Monday meeting stated, "The transportation program is in very good hands and we commend Mr. Caldwell."

The trustee said he and Glover met with Caldwell about two weeks ago to study district transportation.

Ginn reported the district has 17 busses with two of those kept on stand-by for breakdowns.

"The average age for busses in this state is 10 years—our busses are averaging a little older than that," he stated.

The trustee said the district's average annual transportation expenditure of $22,000 includes tire purchases and state inspection fees.

He noted the district spent $40,000 for transportation, but that figure includes propane fuel conversion kit installation costs.

Out of the state's 152 school districts, Bay St. Louis ranked the sixth lowest in transportation expenditures per student for the 1981-82 school year at a rate of $37, Ginn reported.

The trustee said many districts spend more than $100 per student for transportation.

Drivers are required to make regular safety inspections and fill out check lists, he said.

However, Ginn said Caldwell is experiencing problems obtaining enough bus drivers from the ranks of district employees.

"For the first time we will have to go outside the system to get drivers," Ginn stated.

He said students are sometimes hired as drivers, but they experience discipline problems.

Ginn reported Caldwell spends 65 percent of his time handling transportation matters and needs an assistant to lessen the burden so the assistant superintendent can devote a more time to his other duties.

Glover stated, "Donating 65 percent of time to transportation is a waste of his (Caldwell's) time. The board should be given something as an alternative." Trustee Betty Diboll agreed with Glover.

In another matter, J.D. McCullough, superintendent of education, welcomed new Trustee Reginald A. Robinson, 72, of 710 St. Francis St. in Bay St. Louis who replaces Maurice Singleton, whose term expired recently.

Robinson said "words were inadequate to express" his appreciation for the appointment by the Bay St. Louis City Council to serve a five-year term. He is a native of Grand Bay, Ala. and moved here with his wife, Bernice, in 1936.

Robinson has served on founding committees of the Hancock County Community Action Agency, United Way and American Red Cross chapter, and Hancock General Hospital.

He was the third president of the Hancock County Civic Club, president of the former Valena C. Jones Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association and chairman of the VCJ School Board Advisory Committee.

Robinson is president of First Missionary Baptist Church in Bay St. Louis, treasurer of the Gulf Coast District of Baptist Churches and has served as president of the State Sunday School and Training Union Congress since 1950.

Potential stone crab fishery being studied in Sound

Researchers at the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory have begun a two-year study of the potential for development of a stone crab fishery in waters of Mississippi Sound.

Principal investigators of the project are Harriet Perry, an associate biologist, and Kenneth C. Stuck, a research associate, in the fisheries research and management division of the Laboratory.

The stone crab (Menippe mercenaria), supports the third largest crustacean fishery in Florida. Most of the stone crabs caught in the United States come from south Florida where favorable habitat conditions result in a great abundance of the species.

"However," states Mrs. Perry, "the stone crab found in Mississippi is a different species although closely related to the Florida stone crab." Two taxonomists, Austin Williams, with the U.S. National Museum, Washington, D.C., and Darryl Felder, at Southwestern Louisiana University, Lafayette, are collaborating on the description of the stone crab in the northern Gulf of Mexico. Williams and Felder learned of the research proposed by Perry and Stuck and asked that nothing about their work be divulged until it was completed.

Prior to submitting this research proposal, Perry points out, the Laboratory had provided assistance to another researcher, Theresa Bert, at Yale University, who has done extensive work in the south Florida stone crab fishery. Bert has a grant from the Gulf of Mexico Fishery Management Council to do genetic research on the different populations of Menippe in the Gulf of Mexico, and had asked each state to provide study specimens.

Bert does not believe that the local stone crab is a truly separate species; she has found mercenaria genes in the Mississippi specimens. That means they are capable of breeding with the Florida species and, therefore, are not a distinct species.

"Because of this situation concerning the status of the species, much life history data on the Florida species we had planned to use, will not now be useful to our study," comments Perry. "We will be starting from scratch."

"Also," she adds, "we need some basic physiological research and information. We do not understand anything about the trophic relationships of the local stone crabs...what they eat or what eats them."

During this calendar year, project personnel will look at the juvenile and larval life history of Mississippi stone crabs and what numbers are being caught in the blue crab fishery at this time.

In Mississippi, a small amount of stone crabs have always been taken as an incidental catch in the blue crab fishery. In the past, several years, this incidental harvest has increased dramatically and local fishermen have become interested in fishing for them directly.

Fishing costs have continued to rise recently but the value of the hard blue crabs to fishermen has not increased that much. Establishment of a stone crab fishery would provide a source of supplemental income for local fishermen. Stone crabs also may become a "specialty item" on more restaurant menus.

Stone crabs are entering the blue crab fishery by two means; some crab fishermen remove the larger claw and return the animal to the water (it is able to regenerate the claw), others do not cull their catch and stone crabs go to the processing plants along with the blue crabs, where they are cooked and the claws sold to seafood markets. The claws are the saleable portion of the stone crab.

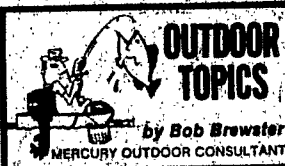

Perry and Stuck have already submitted a preproposal for the second year of research on the stone crab, intending to do some tagging and trapping studies to capture the crabs and document their distribution, abundance, and habitat preference.

The Laboratory, the U.S. Office of Sea Grant, and the State of Mississippi are jointly funding this project, for $47,725, with GCRL providing $19,674 of in-kind support, the Mississippi-Alabama Sea Grant College, $15,276, and the State, $12,775.

SPORTS

THIRD HAND ABOARD
One of the most difficult things for a fisherman to do in his boat is trim away excess monofilament line after tying on a new lure. Imagine the problem. With one hand he holds the lure and with the other he holds the excess line under tension. Now, with his third hand he opens a knife and cuts away.

None of us has three hands, but most anglers wish they could find an occasional helping hand. Trimming away excess line is important because you want to make the cut as close to the knot as possible, thereby eliminating any line which might interfere with the action of the lure. Some additional third-hand needs are lure repair, hook sharpening, spooling new line on a reel, wire leader tying, and many other on-board chores.

For those times when two hands aren't enough, here's an idea used by Mercury Outboards' fishing experts that makes three-handed work simple. Somewhere along the gunwale of your boat, preferably near the fishing seats, mount one or two large paper clamps, the spring-loaded kind normally used to hold a dozen or so sheets of paper together.

District soccer action continues Saturday

With the District Playdowns only another weekend away, the rosters have been finalized for all participating teams.

In tune-up games this past weekend Dr. Murphree DDS, and Mary Carter Paints played on Sunday in lieu of playing a Slidell team kept home by the flooding.

The result was a hard-fought 2-0 win for Dr. Murphree DDS. The teams were evenly matched, the difference being that Mary Carter Paints was missing two key defensive players. Both teams should do well in the Playdowns.

Meanwhile at the Seminary on Saturday the morning started with SportsWorld hosting Ocean Springs (U-16 Girls).

SportsWorld drew first blood, but Ocean Springs came back to tie the game at 2-2 at the beginning of the second half.

Then the Giants got two quick goals and appeared to have the game well in hand. However, Ocean Springs came roaring back to eke out a 5-4 decision over the home team.

In the following game Ocean Springs (U-16 Boys) easily dominated Homes of the South and cruised to a 6-1 victory. Finally Gulf Coast Waste played Orange Grove (U-14 Boys) to a 1-1 tie.

Sea Coast Echo traveled to Biloxi, as did SportsWorld for their second game of the day. The Panthers put on tremendous pressure against Biloxi, but a superb effort by the Biloxi goaltender resulted in a 2-0 win for Biloxi over a frustrated Sea Coast Echo eleven.

Then SportsWorld took the field and played a very lackluster game until the fourth quarter when Dana Wheeler ignited a four goal rally with two goals to bring home a 5-1 decision.

On Sunday Gulfport (U-16 Boys) came to play Homes of the South. It was a completely different home team from the previous day as Homes of the South came back from a 3-1 deficit to tie the game in the second half.

However, due to a missed penalty shot and a late Gulfport goal the eventual decision was in the visitor's favor, 4-3. Loiacano played a doubleheader against Gulfport and Long Beach which resulted in two losses for the home team.

In the first game the lack of practice due to the rains this past week got Loiacano's off to a slow start, and in the second game they ran out of gas in the second half. With good weather and a breather between games this team will do better in the Playdowns.

This next weekend the girls' teams will go to Ocean Springs on Saturday afternoon for two 3 p.m. games. Homes of the South is scheduled to go to Slidell for two games, but these games may be moved to the Seminary depending on the condition of the Slidell fields after the recent flooding.

Dr. Murphree DDS and Mary Carter Paints are tentatively scheduled to play each other again. Gulf Coast Waste will also be playing this weekend, but the team and time have not yet been definitely established.

On Sunday Mary Carter Paints will play the Gulfport U-12 Select team at 1:30 p.m. and Dr. Murphree DDS will play a Slidell Select team. The Gulfport and Long Beach U-10 teams will return to play Loiacano's and Little Italy.

These teams are representing your community, so let's all get behind them and encourage all players to make all practices and games between now and April 23. BASC

It's the Hancock Bank Individual Retirement Account, and with it, you can earn interest and defer taxes until your retirement. An individual can set aside up to $2,000.

and a working couple can set aside up to $4,000... tax free! And you can do this even if you're covered by another pension plan.

Ask your Hancock representative how an easy-to-open IRA can delay tax day. But hurry... time is running out! And don't forget: right now, your IRA can be eligible for 1982 tax benefits.

Children's book author takes USM medallion award

Katherine Paterson, noted author of children's books, was presented the coveted University of Southern Mississippi Medallion for distinguished service in the field of children's literature during the recent Sixteenth Annual Children's Book Festival at USM.

Paterson's books include, "The Sign of the Cross," "Nightingales That Weep," "The Master Puppeteer," "Angels and Other Strangers," and "Jacob Have I Loved."

The recipient of many national awards, Paterson said that she was very proud of the USM Medallion because, "It was given for the body of my work...this is a first."

The USM Children's Book Festival also featured other national and internationally known contributors to children's literature.

Brian Alderson, children's book editor for the London Times, Bertha Amoss, New Orleans illustrator-writer-teacher, Bette Greene, Arkansas born illustrator-author and Tommie de Paola, authorillustrator, led discussion groups and lectured during the two-day festival.

Alderson, addressing a capacity crowd in the USM Performing Arts Center, cautioned parents and teachers to balance adolescent children's reading materials between the realism and fantasy.

Citing the positive aspects of realistic fiction, he said that realism teaches children to become better citizens, to learn about the real world and to avoid disappointment in the unreality of fantasy.

In addition to lectures, talks, films and banquets, the Book Festival featured autograph sessions which allowed the 800 participants to meet and talk with the authors.

During a concluding session of the festival, Paterson talked about an incident in Kansas where one of her books was questioned by local school board for objectionable language.

Through the dedicated efforts of local librarians and experts in the field of children's literature, the school board found the book to be acceptable and exemplary in content as well.

Paterson is a religious scholar with ample credentials as well as an author of children's books.

"You can't imagine how I felt," she said, "I felt like I had a child on trial, but it proved that those librarians were working to uphold the Constitution of the United States and to insure our children's right to books."

"Dorothy can have Oz. I'll take Kansas any day," Paterson concluded.

WORKING VACATION—Having missed the opening of the Brighton pavilion for the second time in the same century, the Doctor travels to the leisure planet of Argolis for holiday, only to find trouble, as usual. A reptile species, called Foamasi, right photo, are attempting to take over the business operation of Argolis, a planet previously ravaged by nuclear war. At left, the Doctor, portrayed by Tom Baker in his final season in the "Doctor Who" series, advances in age far beyond his years after a brief spell in an astounding contraption called a "tachyon generator," normally used on Argolis for fun. But it's no laughs for the Doctor and Romana, played by Laila Ward, when they are accused of murder and held against their wills as a mad Argolian prepares for war in a losing battle. "The Leisure Hive" can be seen at 8 p.m., Monday-Thursday, April 18-21, on "Doctor Who" on the Mississippi ETV Network. Brand new "Doctor Who" programs, starring the new "regenerated" Doctor, Peter Davison, can be seen on Mississippi ETV beginning this summer. "Doctor Who" programs starring Baker will continue to be rebroadcast.

Growing Child

Learning about "NO!"

"No, no!" is an automatic response to babies who grab at glasses or poke curious fingers in your eye.

A firm but loving "No, no!" can also be a tool to teach toddlers to control their own activities and to respect the rights and possessions of others, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter.

Toddlers can be taught that "No, no!" means "Stop what you are doing — NOW!" When they learn this, "No, no!" provides a way of controlling their activity when they are out of immediate reach. Their response will give you time to get to them when they are headed for trouble.

If "No, no!" is to be effective and useful, parents must be selective in the use of it. The anxious parent who says "No, no!" to everything only confuses a child.

Nor is it enough just to say "No, no!" Parents must follow through at first by actually stopping the child by removing him from the hazard — or by removing the endangered object from him. Follow-through every time is important until a toddler responds consistently.

Don't expect miracles! It is not enough just to teach a toddler that "No, no!" means "Stop!" That is important to his safety and is necessary for that reason.

But it is only a negative approach, because toddlers are always doing something. If you stop them from doing one thing you must provide them with an acceptable substitute activity.

Very young children, especially toddlers, have so very much to learn. They must learn the names of objects, what the objects do, how they are used. They must learn what objects may be touched safely and which ones can be handled, thrown, pulled, pushed, squeezed, sat on or jumped on.

Young children must learn all this and much more. Parents can help children learn by naming objects, by using them properly and by talking about actions and activities. And they must help children learn to control their own actions. A good start is to use "No, no!" firmly, consistently, and wisely.

THE SCRIBBLERS

The scribbles. They've just got to close their fists around those fat black crayons — and scribble. Around and around they go, in huge arcs, angular zig-zags, blurs, and blobs. Unfortunately, scribbles like to use walls for their canvases.

(If you provide an alternative for a scribbler, like a large chalkboard and colored chalk, an easel with newspaper and paint, or lots of plain paper (the back of computer printouts or shelf paper in rolls make marvelous drawing pads) you'll have fewer pictures on your walls.)

Scribbling may look like nonsense to adults, but there is some sense in it for a three-year-old.

When children learn to stop their arm movements in time, those big circles become faces. Tight round scribbles make eyes, looser ones make curly hair.

Sweeping lines stop short for arms, fingers, mouths, spiky hair. Pounding with the point of the crayon, when it becomes less violent, makes pretty dots of snow and gentle raindrops. Scribbling is necessary preparation for drawing — and writing, too.

But it's hard to know what to say to a youngster when you're presented with a work of art. "That's very nice," sounds as phony as it is. "What is it?" is even phonier, since the child probably doesn't know either.

"I really like purple scribbles!" is probably the most honest, appreciative, and gracious thing you can say!

For more information about the physical and social development of children up to the age of six, write to Growing Child, P.O. Box 620N, Lafayette, LA 70002. Include child's birthdate when writing. A year's subscription to the newsletter costs $11.95.

Loneliness viewed as most common ailment of aged

As activities consultant for a Yalobusha County nursing home in 1979, Dr. Frank Butts noticed that one of the most common ailments shared by the elderly was not a biological dysfunction; it was loneliness.

That's why the 29-year-old assistant professor of health, physical education and recreation at The University of Mississippi is determined to spread the word about his "Reach Out to a Keenager" program, which was implemented in Oxford in January.

Engaging his therapeutic recreation class at Ole Miss as a volunteer group for the outreach program, Dr. Butts set up weekly visitations between the students and "Keenagers" (Dr. Butts' livelier term for the "aged") in Lafayette County's golden Years Retirement Home and Graceland Convalescent Center.

"Reach Out to a Keenager" encourages student volunteers to visit the resident or residents assigned to them at least once each week during the school semester, Dr. Butts explained. "The students establish a regular visiting relationship with the residents by talking, reading aloud, doing activities with the 'Keenagers' or just holding their hand."

Pointing to the successful combination of matching the young with the old, Dr. Butts describes the program as a simple, but effective solution for "one of the most pressing needs of the institutionalized elderly today - visitation."

Of the more than 1.5 million older Americans confined to nursing homes, almost 50 percent have no viable relationship with a close relative," he noted. "There is a scarcity of people outside the nursing home who visit, and the student volunteers provide a bright spot for residents during the week."

Dr. Butts also stresses the benefits that students receive when they become a part of the visitation program.

"The learning experience for student participants is immense," he said, not only because they become more aware of a growing segment of the population - the elderly - and their special needs, but also because the students are exposed to another avenue for future employment opportunities, such as geriatric recreational therapy.

Ole Miss graduate student Rodney Whittle, a student volunteer from Cullman, Ala., agrees that the benefits of the reach-out program are not just for the elderly. "In addition to becoming close friends with the residents, you also learn about the aging process, which is something most young people know little about," he noted.

At the close of the school semester, departing students are encouraged to continue correspondence with their newly-acquired friends, Dr. Butts said, and new students will be assigned to replace them. Continuity from semester to semester and from year to year is crucial if the program is to be an effective visitation program, he added.

Because "Reach Out to a Keenager" has successfully provided companionship to many nursing home residents in the Oxford community, Dr. Butts is eager to see the volunteer program spread to college campuses across the country. He has organized a "Reach Out to a Keenager" Club and has mailed literature to college and university educators, explaining the program and urging them to involve a class or student organization in the community project.

"As simple as this program appears, just think of the impact it can have on the quality of life of the institutionalized elderly if physical educators and recreators in just a fraction of our colleges and universities join the program," Dr. Butts said.

"By encouraging college classes and clubs to participate, 'Reach Out to a Keenager' can grow into a nationwide project offering friendship and increased understanding between the aged and our youth."

Student groups interested in joining the "Reach Out to a Keenager" Club are encouraged to write Dr. Butts at the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, University, MS 39677. A membership fee of $5 per year entitles the volunteer organization to quarterly newsletters on the progress and innovative ideas of fellow "Reach Out" volunteers.

Art school founder to discuss color

Impressionist painter Henry Hensche will present an outdoor oil painting demonstration and lecture on color Saturday from 9:30 a.m. until noon at the home of Elizabeth Vest, 974 South Beach Blvd. in Bay St. Louis.

A student of Hensche, Mrs. Vest is sponsoring the demonstration to introduce the artist to interested members of the community, she said.

The 82-year-old painter is founder of and teacher at Cape School of Art in Provincetown, Mass.

Born in Chicago, Hensche studied at the Art Students' League in New York City, N.Y., before moving to Europe to study with Charles Hawthorne.

A featured artist in 20 Oil Painters and How They Work, a compilation of articles from American Artist magazine, Hensche has taught and lectured throughout the country and is considered the foremost colorist in this country, said Mrs. Vest.

The public is invited to attend the free demonstration. Interested persons may call 467-3849 or 467-6649 for more information, although reservations are not required.

Because the demonstration will be held outside, guests may want to bring chairs, said Mrs. Vest. In the event of rain, it will be moved to an indoor location near her home, she said.

Ole Miss journalism award goes to John O. Emerich Jr.

One of the South's most prominent newspapermen has been awarded The University of Mississippi's annual Silver Em Award.

John O. Emerich Jr., editor and publisher of the Greenwood Commonwealth, and publisher of the McComb Enterprise Journal was presented the award Friday during the 37th Annual Mississippi Scholastic Press Institute on the Ole Miss campus.

The Institute is sponsored by the University's Department of Journalism and coordinated by the Ole Miss Division of Continuing Education.

"Emerich is a name long associated with Mississippi journalism," said Dr. J. R. Hoar, acting chairman of the Ole Miss Department of Journalism. "It is highly appropriate for John Emerich's name to be added to the list of distinguished recipients of other years, both for his accomplishments and as a tribute to the tradition in journalism established by his father, J. O. Emerich Sr., longtime editor and publisher of the McComb Enterprise Journal."

The Silver Em is presented annually to an outstanding journalist with a Mississippi background. Last year's recipient was Harold Burson, founder and chairman of the board of Burson-Marsteller, world-renowned public relations firm.

Judge Griffin attends seminar

Circuit Judge J. Ruble Griffin of Bay St. Louis attended the recent Trial and Appellate Judges Seminar at the LaFont Inn in Pascagoula.

Topics covered at the two-day seminar included developing dispositional alternatives for delinquents, a media demonstration and first amendment considerations, and the impact of the Mississippi Educational Reform Act of 1982 on Mississippi youth courts. Also discussed at the seminar were procedures for disposition of property seized during drug arrests, services provided by the Mississippi State Hospital, and an update on civil law.

Emerich and his wife, Cella, have a daughter in Austin, Texas, and a reporter son who currently is a graduate student at U.C.L.A.

He has been editor and publisher of the Commonwealth since 1973. In addition to publishing this paper and the Enterprise-Journal, he also publishes three Mississippi weeklies: The Columbian Progress of Columbia, the Sun-Sentinel of Charleston, and the Enterprise-Tocsin of Indianola. He is a partner-owner of the Indianola paper.

He has been a Nieman Fellow at Harvard University, a Pulitzer Prize juror four times, twice a judge for the American Society of Newspaper Editors writing awards, and once a judge for the Scripps-Howard Foundation's Walker Stone editorial writing contest.

He served four years as a director of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, three years as a director of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, and four years as a director of the Mississippi Press Association before becoming its president.

He has served on The University of Mississippi Journalism Advisory Committee and is a director of the Ole Miss Alumni Association.

While in Houston, he was president of the Texas UPI Association and chairman of the Texas Bar-Press Committee. He has taught journalism at Mississippi Valley State University and was cited by that institution for outstanding community service and leadership.

State again offering summer program for talented

To provide superior high school students with stimulation in the pursuit of knowledge and to give them the opportunity to earn college credits, Mississippi State University is again offering its Summer Program for Academically Talented Students (SPATS).

Applications will be accepted from students in the top 10 percent of their class who have a standard composite minimum of 23 on the American College Test, and whose parents and high school administrators feel are mature enough to profit from the program.

May 20 is the deadline for applying.

Participants will live in university housing and be afforded all regular summer student privileges, such as the swimming pool, handball and tennis courts, softball, volleyball and other recreational programs," said Dr. Carmen McClendon, director of SPATS and the University Honors Program.

Students may take up to two courses during each of the two five-week summer terms. Course credit will be reserved until the student has graduated from high school.

McClendon said an official application form must be completed by the student and then submitted to the high school principal.

"The application will then be forwarded to Mississippi State, along with an official transcript of grades and standardized test scores, including the ACT," McClendon said.

Letters from both a parent and the high school principal attesting to the student's maturity, character and readiness for college work must accompany the application, she added.

All forms, letters, and test scores must arrive at the director's office by May 20.

Complete information on SPATS may be obtained from McClendon by writing in care of the University Honors Program, Drawer EH, Mississippi State, Mississippi, 39762, or telephoning 325-2522.

The final day of the conference will include presentations on prosecutorial ethics, an update on Parchman and a discussion of the retirement system.

PRC pageant preliminary to Miss America event

The 1983 Miss Dixie Scholarship Pageant, a Miss America Preliminary, will be held April 30 at Moody Hall on the Pearl River Junior College campus in Poplarville.

The event is an open pageant in the state for young women who reside or attend college in the state of Mississippi.

The winner will enter the Miss Mississippi Pageant held to select the state queen, who will compete for the crown of Miss America in the national competition to be held in Atlantic City, New Jersey in September.

To qualify, a young woman must be between the ages of 17 and 26 by Labor Day and must never have been married. Personality, poise, beauty and talent are the major requirements for competition. Each contestant will be judged in private interview, in evening gown, in swimsuit, and in the presentation of her talent. Among awards will be a pageant gown specially designed for the winner.

All reigning queens vying for the title of Miss Mississippi will be invited to the Miss Dixie Pageant as special guests where they will be introduced on stage. Emcee for the evening will be Becky Wilson Cook, Miss Louisiana of 1975. Special entertainers include Pam and Nathan Davidson, recording artists; Dance Entourage; and Michael Marks, pianist. Cindy Malone, the reigning Miss Dixie, will entertain and crown her successor.

Director Joyce Pope says,

Southern offering summer Leadership Studies Program

Developing the leadership potential of Mississippi's youth is a way to insure the state's continued progress.

In order to provide training and enhance leadership skills the Leadership Studies Program has been established at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Students enrolled in grades seven through 12, who are recommended by school officials and who have a desire to develop and enhance their leadership ability, are eligible for the program, according to Dr. Frances Karnes, director of the Center for Gifted Studies.

The July 11-18 program will include discussions for becoming leaders in the school, community, various youth organizations and church or synagogue.

Training will be in the areas of written and oral communication, group dynamics, problem solving, values clarification, planning, personal skills and decision making. Guest speakers, films and other resources will be utilized.

Any junior or senior high school student with a desire to learn more about leadership is eligible. No present leadership positions and no specific grades or intelligence test scores are required for this new program. Schools are not limited to a particular number of students either.

A noon meal will be provided and students living beyond commuting distance of Hattiesburg may have campus lodging at an extra fee but a parent or guardian must stay in the dormitory to supervise the student.

Enrollment in the program is limited. Deadline for applications is March 31. For additional information contact Dr. Frances Karnes, Southern Station Box 8207, Hattiesburg, MS 39401 or call (601) 288-5236.

High blood pressure problems may originate in childhood

Children may hold the key to when hypertension begins and how its development affects "target" organs — the heart, the kidneys, the brain.

"Cardiovascular abnormalities in adults that result from long-standing hypertension may be present in some degree in children. More pediatricians are becoming aware of this and have begun checking blood pressure along with height and weight," says Dr. Walter S. Culpepper III, pediatric cardiologist at the Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans, La.

In a study published recently in the Annals of Internal Medicine, Dr. Culpepper points out that "children do not necessarily have to have excessively high blood pressure to develop 'cardiac hypertrophy,' a thickening of the wall of the left ventricle.

"This can happen even when the child is at the high end of the 'normal' range of blood pressure for his age group."

"Little information is available on the cardiac status of apparently healthy children, adolescents in particular. Physicians have found that teenagers with consistently borderline or high normal blood pressures have a two-to-fourfold greater risk of developing sustained hypertension during adulthood than those with lower blood pressure. Thus, blood pressure level in adolescents is a strong predictive factor for future hypertension," he adds.

Dr. Culpepper and a team of physicians from the Ochsner Clinic and the section of pediatric cardiology at the University of Chicago, used an echocardiogram to test 27 children with borderline hypertension and 26 with normal blood pressure. The procedure does not require surgery. Twelve of the

"Cardiac problems other than those caused by birth defects can occur in young children. Interest in high blood pressure in the young has taken on new emphasis in recent years. As a result of comprehensive studies over time, current recommendations are that young children with elevated blood pressure early in life should be treated and followed closely," he cautions.

"Pediatricians must intervene early in the disease process which may later be irreversible. High blood pressure is but a symptom of a disease that affects all the systems of the body and can affect not only the heart, but can damage smaller blood vessels in the brain and kidney," he adds.

Dr. Culpepper urges that families continue to bring children to their pediatrician or family doctor even after they become school age. "It is ironic that regular visits to a doctor drop off precipitously when a child reaches school age and yet it is in the 6 to 10-year age bracket wherein more of the changes develop in the heart, kidneys and brain.

"During childhood and adolescence, there is a tendency for blood pressure to vary a good deal. Therefore clinical concern for children at risk for hypertension cannot be restricted to blood pressure measurements. Persistent juvenile borderline hypertension is not rare, especially among teenagers. Children with target organ changes and modest borderline hypertension should be more closely evaluated and followed-up by systematic echocardiographic studies of the anatomy and function of the heart," he explains.

UNO jazz group plans annual spring show

The annual spring show of "All That Jazz" a University of New Orleans musical entertainment group, will be staged April 14-16 at 8 p.m. in the UNO University Center Ballroom.

A dinner show will be included in the program Thursday, April 14, and Friday, April 15, and a cash bar will be available prior to all three performances at 7 p.m.

The program, according to Louis Bernot, group director, will feature music, singing and dancing ranging from the Big Band era to the disco of the '80s.

Admission to the dinner shows is $10, with reserved seating limited to eight tickets per order.

The menu will feature stuffed boneless breast of capon "with all of the trimmings," he said, adding that the dinner show tickets will only be sold in advance.

Bay High students excel in National French Test

Results of the National French Test administered recently to more than fifty million high school pupils show five Bay Senior High girls achieved scores among the top ten in Mississippi.

On the second-year level Stephanie Power, Mary

Langenbacher, and Dianne Tenney were in seventh, ninth, and tenth place respectively.

The only other Mississippi schools included in the Level II top ten scores were Ellisville, Gulfport, Oxford, and St. Andrew's in Jackson.

On the first-year level Lisa

Montgomery and Kim Barrett ranked fifth and sixth in the state's top ten grades.

The other schools placing in this group were Oxford, St. Andrew's, Gulfport, and Laurel.

The National French Test, given annually since 1932, is composed of 80 questions, 40 of them heard on tape. The students are tested on vocabulary, grammar, aural and reading comprehension, sound discrimination, and French geography.

The 1983 test was administered in Gulfport to students from the coast counties.

French teacher at Bay High is Mrs. Emily deMontuzin of Bay St. Louis.

Choctaw Indians featured in Capital photo exhibit

The traditions and lifestyle of the Choctaw Indians were documented in 1981-1982 by photographer Carole Thompson, former Jackson resident.

Thirty of her photographs will be shown at the State Historical Museum in Jackson April 3 - May 15 in an exhibit, "Strangers in Their Own Land: A Choctaw Portfolio."

The band of Choctaw in Mississippi numbers about 5,000, most of them descendants of those who refused to leave during the United States government's 1800s attempt to relocate Indians to the West.

They demonstrate a strong desire to retain their language and customs, a task ever difficult in today's homogenous society.

Through the exhibit, Thompson says, she hopes to "portray a few of the individuals who have maintained their (the Choctaw) language, culture and many of their traditions. These are glimpses into another way of life — a way of life not to be defined by white or black eyes; only Choctaw.

Carole Thompson is a graduate of Indiana University at Bloomington and has worked as a newspaper and magazine photographer and reporter for the past ten years. In 1977 she was named one of America's most promising young photographers by Time-Life Books. She worked on the Choctaw portfolio from 1981-1982, during the years that she lived in Mississippi with her husband, newspaperman John Flynn. They currently live in Detroit.

The exhibit is accompanied by a catalog, available in the Old Capitol Sales Shop. The public is invited to view the show and tour the building free of charge. For further information, call the Museum at 354-6222.
